Workshop on Harvesting the Scientific Investment in Prevention Science to Promote Children’s Cognitive, Affective, and Behavioral Health

There have been major successes in creating evidence-based interventions (EBIs) over the last 50 years – examples of which were presented at the Forum’s first workshop, held April 1-2, 2014, that addressed strategies for scaling family-focused preventive interventions. This second Forum workshop will focus on the opportunities and outcomes currently shaping up within a vortex of multiple converging forces including, but not limited to, new federal mandates to broadly implement EBIs, especially in health (including mental health) care with the Accountable Care Act and the Mental Health Parity Act; decreasing social and behavioral prevention funding nationally; the needs of implementers of EBIs at the federal, state, local levels; and ongoing balancing of resources optimizing population health and ensuring reparative interventions for youth with chronic and acute cognitive, affective, and behavioral health conditions.

The first day of the workshop will engage participants in breakout group discussions of how these opportunities and challenges play-out within the sectors of (1) health care (including mental health), (2) schools, and (3) child welfare and juvenile/family justice. Two 1.5 hour sector-based breakout group discussions will be held, each initiated with lead-off panel presentations. The group discussions will center on the following questions:

- What are the key gaps in the sector for broad diffusion of evidence-based prevention science?
- What are the key levers and blockages at the system level to the broad implementation of EBIs with fidelity to the original designs?
• How have the existing scientific norms, implementation strategies, and practices limited or provided impetus to quality care and improved outcomes for youth at the national, state, and local community levels?
• What are the key changes that are going to be needed in financing models, scientific models, and implementation models within each sector in order to broadly implement EBI s (be the EBI a practice, a program, a principle, or a strategy)?

The second day of the workshop will include summary reports from representatives of each of the three breakout groups and presentations on and discussion of new methodological directions in prevention science to promote children’s cognitive, affective, and behavioral health.
