

Presented by the Committee on National Statistics and the Committee on Population

Approaches to Estimating the Prevalence of Human Trafficking in the United States: A Workshop

Speakers include:

Harry Cook	International Organization for Migration
Lauren Damme	Bureau of International Labor Affairs
Michaelle De Cock	International Labour Organization, Geneva
Kelly Dore	National Human Trafficking Survivor Coalition
Davina Durgana	Walk Free Foundation
Annick Febrey	Human Trafficking Institute
Kelly Gleason	UN University Centre for Policy Research and the ILO
Patrick Hannon	Human Smuggling and Trafficking Center
Jessica Hubley	Annie Cannons
Abby Long	Office to Monitor and Combat Trafficking in Persons
Megan Lundstrom	Free Our Girls
Bernard Silverman	University of Nottingham (UK)

This workshop will explore:

- Issues and gaps in estimating the prevalence of human trafficking in the U.S.
- Methods for estimating human trafficking in other countries
- Current and innovative sampling, technological approaches, and analytical strategies for estimating prevalence
- Policy considerations for collaboration and sharing human trafficking data across disciplines

Sponsored by the Office on Women's Health, U.S.
Department of Health and Human Services